"A box worth ticking"
Metro

'American Brit', Erich McElroy, brings his hit Edinburgh Fringe show -Erich McElroy's Imperfect Guide to Picking the Perfect President – to London for an exclusive run at the Museum of Comedy.

With just over a year to go until the Presidential election, the race to find the next leader of the free world has entered a crucial stage, and Erich's here to explain what it all means.

With the aid of pin-sharp Powerpoint debriefings and some killer video evidence, Erich takes a whirlwind tour through the eccentric world of American politics and introduces us to some of the runners and riders for the world's number 1 job - some of whom you wouldn't want running your local church fete.

"Smart, sharp, endearing comic"
The List

"No other nation does politics with the same absurdity and insanity as America" says Erich. "Becoming President takes just the right mix - a pinch of God, a dash of freedom and a flatbed full of firearms."

Erich discovers that there are other factors in the mix too, such as the ability of a candidate to swallow the biggest corn dog in Iowa, the number of American flags on their lapel (denoting their 'patriot percentage') and their knowledge of how best to execute a bunny wabbit, yes really.

"Well worth it, even if you're not in the least bit political."
Edinburgh Evening News

Originally from Seattle, Erich McElroy has lived in the UK since 2000. Though he left behind baseball and apple pie, Erich has never given up an obsession with American politics, after all what's funnier – a by-election in Dullsville-upon-Boredom or a debate where everyone involved has a gun?

With acclaimed shows about citizenship and Scottish Independence under his belt, Erich has been in demand as a pundit and has written for The Independent, The Herald, The Huffington Post and even Saga. Erich's broadcasting credits include BBC News, BBC Breakfast, STV and Newsnight and he can be heard each week as co-host of SomeNews Live on Fubar Radio.
